

Filipinos handle life and its ups and downs with a joyful and fun-loving attitude. We have a good personality, a sense of humor, and a fondness for happiness, which contribute not only to the Filipino charm but also to the Filipino spirit's indomitability. Laughing at ourselves and our situation is a vital coping tool.

The Filipino's fondness for socials and celebrations, our ability to laugh even in the most trying of situations, and the attractiveness of political wit all demonstrate a sense of pleasure and humor.

As a result, there is an emotional balance, optimism, an appropriate dislike for power and office, and the ability to survive.

JOYFULLNESS

Filipinos are a usually cheerful people. We can smile in any scenario.

Our optimistic personality and optimistic outlook enable us to recover from the most adversities, including natural catastrophes, wars, and, undoubtedly, this epidemic.

Being able to eat three times a day is a sign of joyfulness. It is the ability to meet the needs and desires of yourself and your family. It is job security. It is a sense of safety and security both within and outside of your house. But those are the fundamentals.

Joyfulness is both excellence, as well as an atmosphere in which greatness is acknowledged, appreciated, encouraged, and rewarded. Joyfulness is the chance to find significance in life and make a difference. Joyfulness is receiving what we are due.

MUMOR

As a result of Filipinos' joy, humor is one of the reasons why we Filipinos are happy. Filipinos employ 'national humor' in a variety of ways, and here are some of the reasons why. Filipinos utilize humor as an intervention or a coping method to cope with stress
